"New American Painting", NEW AMERICAN PAINTING #98, Open Studio Press: Boston, 2012.

New American Paintings was founded in 1993 as an experiment in art publishing. With over five thousand artists reviewed annually, it has become America's largest and most important series of artist competitions. Each competition is cataloged in a unique volume: Northeast, South, Midwest, West, Pacific Coast, and MFA Annual. Featured artists are selected on the basis of artistic merit and provided space for free.

Benjamin Degen

Editor's Pick p166

The frivolity of Benjamin Degen's work is not just visible in the representational narrative that plays out in his colorful scenes, but also in the playfulness with which he approaches formal issues, implied dimension and the resulting tension between pattern and abstraction. Faux bois bands of color are sewn back and forth across his compositions like stitches in a quilt, carrying with them a fresh aesthetic kinship with folk art. The formal inspection at play on the surface of these paintings is as much a character in Degen's images as the kittenish nude subjects that cavort throughout them.

Image functions as a space where the physical and the metaphysical planes of our existence intersect. Drawing, painting, and sculpture are the tools I use to access this image space. My pieces are constructions, utilizing individual elements and compositional conventions of Western and Eastern classical aesthetic traditions, American folk art, representational painting, abstract painting, video games, and typography as building materials. The compositions exist in an image space that floats between abstraction, pattern, and representation. This free-floating space is my Hephaestean forge where I attempt to smash together, interweave, and melt these elements into a new object.
